DEBUTANTE AFFAIRS

Miss Rebecca A. Lycett is Guest of Honor at a Luncheon Given by Mrs. Curwen

One of the prettiest luncheons of the season was given today by Mrs. Samuel Moore Curwen at her home, Tredegar, Haverford, in honor of her niece, Miss Rebecca A. Lycett, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Lycett, of St. Louis. Miss Lycett is spending the winter with her uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Curwen, and will be much feted as a debutante. Her sisters, Mrs. Stevenson Crothers and Mrs. Edward Hackett, both made their debut several years ago in this city. A third sister married an Englishman last year, and is now living in London. A number of entertainments have been planned in honor of Miss Lycett. Today's luncheon included a large number of the debutantes. The guests were seated at small tables, which were decorated with ferns and autumn flowers. Quaint old-fashioned bouquets were given to each guest. Some among those who attended were Miss Jean Morris Lillo, Miss Katharine Tenney, Miss Katharine Z. Ogden, Miss Anna Binney Brinton, Miss Ruth Coxo, Miss Charlotte Fahnestock, Miss Anna Mary Walthour, Miss Charlotte Ruah, Miss Coraella C. Leidy, Miss Hannah F. Earle, Miss Caroline I. Brinton, Miss Edith H. Baily, Miss Susan B. Inzeroff, Miss Margaret H. Burton, Miss Mary T. Donckis, Miss Katharine A. Bowie, Miss Charlotte W. Brown, Miss Huberta Potter and Miss Cordelia Biddle.

THE DRAMA

MIZZI HAJOS

FLASHES FROM "STARS"

Is public interest in Shakespeare waning? Has the classic drama reached ebb-tide in this country? Since Southern and Marlowe gave up playing Shakespeare profitably, it is said that Shakespeare has been produced at a loss. Miss Margaret Anglin, it is said, found the Bard of Avon less profitable than Oscar Wilde, and gave up "The Taming of the Shrew" for "Lady Windermere's Fan." After William Pavesham's disastrous experiment in Shakespeare last February, general surprise was felt when James K. Hackett decided to play Othello. Mr. Hackett played Othello, but found that public interest turned more to modern comedy and melodrama dealing with criminal millionaires and politicians. So he has relegated his Shakespearean scenery to the storage warehouse, and will presently appear in a new romantic play. The prospect of seeing Shakespeare this season is dim, indeed, the only production promised being "Twelfth Night," with Miss Phyllis Neilson-Terry as star.

E. S. Willard, one of the most popular English actors, has promised to visit America again. Despite his announcement of retirement some time ago, he has arranged with Walter Haas, international impresario, to make a farewell tour of this country in repertory, including "The Middleman" and "The Professor's Love Story." There is also a suggestion to revive "The Silver King," in which Mr. Willard was the original Spilder.

B. MacDonald Hastings, who arrived recently from England, is here to confer with Nazimova about the play, "That Sort," which he has written for her and which will be produced by the Liebler company in a few weeks. Mr. Hastings said he had been robbed of the right to go to war by defective eyesight.

He had the alternative offered to him of bringing a special constable. Many actors, playwrights and writers had joined the constabulary, whose job is watching big plants, railroad stations, public works and so forth and shooting off or arresting German spies that may happen along.

Mr. Hastings reports that Cyril Maude as a special constable.

Philip Merivale, who played Romeo to the Juliet of Phyllis Neilson-Terry at His Majesty's Theatre, London, has been engaged by the Liebler company for the leading role in "Tygamillon," in which Mrs. Patrick Campbell will appear in New York.

Henry B. Harris has selected the title of "A Perfect Lady" for the new play by Channing Pollock and Renold Wolf, in which Rose Stahl will star this season.

J. Hartley Manners' receipts in royalties in one week from the proceeds of his eight companies in this country showing "Peg of My Heart" were $250. Of this amount the Chicago company paid him $58.

Orchestra Season an Assured Success

Judging from the advance sale of season seats, there will be more interest displayed in the coming season of Philadelphia Orchestra concerts than in any of the 14 preceding ones. The Friday afternoon concerts have always been the most popular of the weekly pair, and this year is proving no exception. Every one of the boxes for the matinee series has been subscribed for. But in addition interest in the Saturday evening concerts shows an increase, perhaps due to a realization that the program has enjoyed additional preparation in view of its rendition on the preceding afternoon.

Among those who have taken boxes for Saturday evenings are Alexander Van Rensselaer, Edward Bok, Richard Y. Cook, Mrs. Thomas Robins, Miss Nina Lea, Mrs. L. Howard Weatherly, Mrs. Samuel S. Peis, Mrs. George Alfred Fletcher, Mrs. Samuel H. Austin, William W. Arnold, J. George Klemm, John F. Braun, Thomas Shelton Harrison, Mrs. William Simpson, Jr., Frederick McOwen, George C. Heald.

Among the works not before heard in Philadelphia that Mr. Stokowski is planning to present are Handel's overture to "Armida," Beethoven's overture to "The Corsair," Paderewski's symphony in B minor, a suite by Luff and the choral from Beethoven's cantata, "Wacht auf Ruft uns die Stimme."

American composers will be represented on the list of novelties by a symphony in C minor by Frederick Stock, conductor of the Chicago Symphony Orchestra, and a symphony in E minor by Mrs. H. H. A. Beach.
